UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON T.S. McGREGOR, CLERK
U.S. BANKRUPTCY COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

In Re:)
SMLP, a Washington State) No. 97-06464-W1R
Limited Partnership,) Debtor.) MEMORANDUM DECISION RE:
U.S. TRUSTEE'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT DISALLOWING
FEES AND ORDERING DISGORGEMENT

THIS MATTER came on for hearing before the Honorable Patricia C. Williams on August 7, 2000 upon the U.S. Trustee's Motion for Summary Judgment Disallowing Fees and Ordering Disgorgement. The debtor was represented by Dan O'Rourke and Kevin O'Rourke. Robert Miller, the Assistant U.S. Trustee, was also present. The court reviewed the files and records herein, heard argument of counsel and was fully advised in the premises. The court now enters its Memorandum Decision.

I.

FACTS

Debtor was a limited liability partnership which operated a gambling casino with related food and beverage service. The Chapter 11 proceeding was filed November 26, 1997 and was converted to a Chapter 7 on November 24, 1998. The Chapter 7 Trustee has sufficient funds on hand to pay the administrative expenses in the Chapter 7. Mr. O'Rourke was the attorney for the debtor-in-

1 possession and has requested approval of his professional fees for 2 the proceeding. The U.S. Trustee has objected and argues that the 3 court should deny the request to approve the fees and require 4 Mr. O'Rourke to disgorge all sums held in his trust account for 5 failure to disclose as required by F.R.B.P. 2016.

6 According to the Application for approval of the professional 7 fees, Mr. O'Rourke holds $23,000.00 in his trust account for 8 application to approved fees. The application seeks approval of 9 fees in the amount of $25,903.00 plus costs of $1,875.45 for a 10 total of $27,778.45.¹

11 The source and dates of the deposits into the trust account 12 are as follows:

Date	Amount	Source
11/25/97 (pre-petition)	$7,500.00	Debtor
05/14/98	$3,750.00	Galaxy Gaming
06/01/98	$1,000.00	Debtor
06/12/98	$1,750.00	Debtor
10/15/98	$6,000.00	Galaxy Gaming
11/12/98	$3,000.00	Debtor

20 On December 15, 1997, Mr. O'Rourke requested that the court 21 approve his employment by the bankruptcy estate and an order 22 approving that employment was entered on February 12, 1998. That 23 Application for employment and the Attorney Statement of 24 Compensation filed November 26, 1997 disclosed the payment of the

26

27 ¹This does not include the filing fee of $800 paid by counsel 28 at the time of filing from the trust account nor $2,000 paid by the debtor in February, 1997 for pre-petition services. These payments were timely disclosed and are not in dispute.

1 $7,500.00 which was the only deposit then held. The Application 2 also disclosed that the sum was held in trust for application to 3 any approved fees. Not until August 9, 1999 did Mr. O'Rourke file 4 his request for approval of professional fees. It was that 5 Application which first disclosed the post-petition amounts 6 received from the debtor and Galaxy Gaming.

7 F.R.B.P. 2016 requires the attorney for the debtor to file 8 within 15 days of the order for relief a statement regarding the 9 compensation the debtor has paid or agreed to pay for the 10 professional services and sources of the compensation. That 11 statement was timely filed on November 26, 1997. F.R.B.P. 2016 12 also requires a supplemental statement be filed and served on the 13 U.S. Trustee within 15 days of any later payment or agreement to 14 pay. No supplemental statement was filed.

15 II.

16 ISSUES

- 17 1. Did the debtor's counsel have a duty to disclose under 18 F.R.B.P. 2016?
- 19 2. If a violation occurred, is denial of the award of fees
20 and disgorgement of funds held in the trust account the proper 21 remedy?
- 22 3. If disgorgement is required, should it include both pre-23 petition amounts and post-petition amounts?

24 III.

25 DISCUSSION

- 26 1. Was there a duty to disclose under F.R.B.P. 2016?

27 The debtor's counsel argues that he had no duty to file 28 a supplemental disclosure statement as, under state law, he had a

1 possessory security interest in the funds held. R.C.W. 60.40.010.
2 Even if there were the duty to disclose, Mr. O'Rourke argues that 3 disgorgement is inappropriate due to his status as a secured 4 creditor with rights in the funds. United States Trustee v.
5 Garvey, Schubert & Barer (In re Century Cleaning Servs.), 215 B.R.
6 18 (9th Cir. Or. BAP 1997), based on Oregon statutes, held an 7 attorney had a security interest in funds held in a trust account, 8 but was reversed on other grounds at 195 F.3d 1053 (9th Cir. 1999).
9 Even assuming such a statutory lien existed under Washington law, 10 this does not relieve the attorney from complying with the mandates 11 of the Code as they relate to professional fees. Shapiro Buchman
12 LLP v. Gore Bros. (In re Monument Auto Retail), 226 B.R. 219 (9th 13 Cir. Cal. BAP 1998). If the attorney fails to comply with those 14 mandates, including violation of the duty to disclose, the attorney 15 is not allowed to retain the funds. The existence of a possessory 16 lien would not deprive the court of its authority to require 17 disgorgement of the funds as a sanction for failure to comply with 18 the Code. If the court determines that the attorney should not 19 have fees approved or is not entitled to payment of all fees 20 sought, there is no underlying obligation to be secured with the 21 funds.

22 Debtor's counsel next argues that no supplemental statement
23 was required in this case as the deposits into the trust account 24 were not "payments" but a security retainer. As such, they were 25 only to secure eventual payment after the legal services had been 26 provided and the requested fees approved by the court. Therefore, 27 counsel argues they themselves were not "payments."

28 It is not disputed that the $7,500.00 pre-petition deposit and

1 later deposits were security retainers. In re McDonald Bros.
2 Constr., Inc., 114 B.R. 989 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1990) contains an 3 excellent analysis of the three types of retainers: 1) the classic 4 retainer in which a sum of money is paid to insure an attorney's 5 availability over a period of time and the attorney is entitled to 6 the money regardless of whether any services are actually provided; 7 2) the advance payment retainer in which ownership of the funds 8 passes to the attorney at the time of payment in exchange for the 9 attorney's commitment to provide certain legal services; and 3) a 10 security retainer. A security retainer is not a present payment 11 for future services. Rather, the funds remain property of the 12 client until the attorney performs the service and funds are then 13 applied to the charges for the actual services provided.
14 Typically, funds are deposited into the law firm's trust account 15 and as fees are actually earned and billed, the funds are withdrawn
16 from the trust account and applied to the bill. Any funds 17 remaining after completion of the services are returned to the 18 client.

19 A security retainer is that most commonly encountered in 20 bankruptcy proceedings. In the bankruptcy context such security 21 retainers remain property of the bankruptcy estate and are subject 22 to distribution from the trust account only after compliance with 23 the provisions of the Code regarding compensation of professionals.
24 In re McDonald Bros. Constr., Inc., supra, and SEC v. Interlink
25 Data Network, 77 F.3d 1201 (9th Cir. Cal. 1996).

26 The argument that security retainers are not "payments" 27 requires a contorted reading of F.R.B.P. 2016 inconsistent with the 28 purpose of both § 329 and F.R.B.P. 2016. The purpose of those

1 provisions is to reveal to the court and interested parties all 2 sources of compensation, either actual or anticipated. Placing 3 cash into an attorney trust account removes it beyond the reach of 4 the debtor and the debtor's creditors, but it still remains 5 property of the bankruptcy estate. For purposes of disclosure 6 under § 329, it is just as much a payment as placing the cash into 7 the law firm's general account. The payments which must be 8 disclosed are those for "services rendered or to be rendered in 9 contemplation of or in connection with the case." Such language 10 certainly includes security retainers.²

11 Debtor's counsel timely and fully disclosed the receipt of the 12 pre-petition funds. However, the express language of F.R.B.P. 2016
13 requires disclosure of the receipt of the post-petition funds 14 within 15 days of their receipt. Debtor's counsel argues that as 15 the principal of the debtor revealed these post-petition payments 16 in a July 13, 1998 2004 exam, disclosure occurred. Assuming the 17 substance of the testimony did describe those transactions, the 18 disclosure was untimely. F.R.B.P. 2016 requires disclosure to be 19 served on the U.S. Trustee and filed with the court which makes the 20 information available to all interested parties. Most importantly, 21 the duty to disclose is placed on the debtor's counsel.

22 Debtor's counsel's failure to file and serve a written 23 supplemental disclosure violates F.R.B.P. 2016. The appropriate 24 remedy for that violation must then be determined.

25 _____
26 ²Both § 329 and F.R.B.P. 2016 use the term "agreements." Even 27 if one accepted that these post-petition deposits were not 28 "payments," they certainly were part of some agreement for compensation. Thus, they are subject to disclosure as an "agreement."

1 2. Is denial of the requested fees and disgorgement of the 2 security retainer the appropriate remedy?

3 The facts of each particular case must be examined to 4 determine the appropriate remedy. Failure to file supplemental 5 disclosure statements when post-petition deposits have been made to 6 law firm trust accounts has resulted in the denial of all fees and 7 a return of all funds. Law Offices of Nicholas A. Franke v.
8 Tiffany (In re Lewis), 113 F.3d 1040 (9th Cir. Cal. 1997). The 9 Ninth Circuit in that decision held that bankruptcy courts ". . .
10 have broad and inherent authority to deny any and all compensation 11 when an attorney fails to meet the requirements of these 12 (disclosure) provisions." In re Lewis, supra, at p. 1044. In 13 doing so, the bankruptcy court is exercising its discretion.

14 The facts in the Lewis case were egregious. In January, 1993, 15 the attorney filed a statement of compensation which was false. It 16 indicated that the attorney had received $20,000.00 and the debtor
17 had agreed to pay an additional $20,000.00. In July of 1993, 18 another false statement was filed which indicated that the attorney 19 had received $40,000.00 pre-petition as a security retainer. The 20 U.S. Trustee raised several questions and, after a hearing, the 21 court required the attorney to provide an accounting of all funds
22 received from the debtor. In reality, the attorney had received 23 $10,000.00 pre-petition and an additional $30,000.00 post-petition.
24 The attorney had deliberately delayed several months in filing an 25 application to approve the fees in order to collect the post-26 petition payments. The Bankruptcy Court found that his actions 27 were an attempt to avoid the Code's requirement concerning 28 disclosure of post-petition retainers. The conduct was a "shocking

1 disregard" of the Code's requirements and was a willful violation
2 of both § 329 and F.R.B.P. 2016. For that reason, the court
3 allowed no compensation at all and required disgorgement of all 4 funds received.

5 Clearly, disgorgement is an appropriate remedy and the court, 6 in its exercise of discretion, must determine to what extent the 7 allowance of fees should be denied and the funds held in the trust 8 account be disgorged.

9 3. Should disgorgement include all pre-petition and post-
10 petition amounts?

11 a) Disgorgement of pre-petition payments.

12 The requirement to file a timely supplemental disclosure 13 under F.R.B.P. 2016 is not ambiguous. The requirement is 14 mandatory. Even negligent or inadvertent failure to disclose 15 violates the rule and can lead to a forfeiture of all fees.
16 Peugeot v. United States Trustee (In re Crayton), 192 B.R. 970 (9th 17 Cir. Cal. BAP 1996). Disclosure requirements are to be applied 18 strictly. F.R.B.P. 2016's literal requirements are to be enforced 19 even though the result of its application and enforcement is harsh.
20 Neben & Starrett v. Chartwell Fin. Corp. (In re Park-Helena Corp.), 21 63 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. Cal. 1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1049 22 (1996). However, absent an egregious situation such as in Lewis or 23 an indication of willful rather than negligent failure to disclose, 24 denial of all fees may be too harsh a penalty. In re Boh!
25 Ristorante, Inc., 99 B.R. 971 (9th Cir. Cal. BAP 1989).

26 Any failure to file a supplemental statement of disclosure 27 should result in a denial of some portion of fees and a 28 disgorgement of the same. The requirements of F.R.B.P. 2016 are

1 mandatory and are to be enforced. Enforcement is part of the 2 court's duty to ensure that all professional fees incurred for 3 services benefitting the bankruptcy estate meet the requirements of 4 the Code. Disclosure of post-petition security retainers is one
5 device the framers of the Code and Rules developed to aid the court
6 in performing its duty as well as to aid the United States Trustee
7 in performing his duty to monitor compensation in Chapter 11 8 proceedings. It is also a device to provide information to those 9 parties having an interest in the proceeding.

10 Having concluded that a failure to file supplemental 11 disclosures will result in a penalty and can serve as a basis for 12 denying all fees, the court must then determine the extent of the 13 penalty appropriate in this proceeding.

14 In the present situation, no false Statement of Compensation 15 was filed. The Statement of Compensation and the Application for 16 Employment accurately disclose the facts as they then existed, i.e.
17 the pre-petition payment of the $7,500.00 into the trust account.
18 The Application for approval of fees revealed the post-petition 19 payments, but it was not filed until August 9, 1999, approximately 20 nine months after receipt of the last post-petition payment.
21 Although the delay causes the court some concern, there is no 22 indication that the lapse in time was intended to circumvent the 23 requirements of disclosure. These facts do not justify depriving 24 the debtor's counsel of the pre-petition retainer of $7,500.00.
25 Compensation in that amount is certainly reasonable and otherwise 26 meets the requirements of § 330 and is approved. Debtor's counsel 27 may pay himself that amount from the funds held in the trust 28 account.

b) Disgorgement of post-petition payments.

The first post-petition payment at issue was made on May 14, 1998 by Galaxy Gaming. The relationship of this third-party to the debtor is not known. The file reflects that approximately one week after commencement of the proceeding, the debtor filed a Motion to Assume a Lease dated the day before filing. Under that lease, the debtor leased its real and personal property to Zephyr Cove Capital, a Nevada L.L.C., the manager of which was Galaxy Gaming. Mr. Saucier, the individual who managed the debtor's operations during this proceeding, had signed the Lease both as president of the general partner of the debtor and as president of Galaxy Gaming. That lease was never assumed.

At the time of this payment, the file reflects that the Washington State Attorney General had filed a Motion to Lift the Automatic Stay to allow a state administrative proceeding to revoke the debtor's liquor license to proceed. At a hearing on May 5, 1998, the Motion was set for final hearing on June 10, 1998. Also pending was a Motion to Dismiss or Convert by the U.S. Trustee as the debtor had neither filed operating statements nor paid U.S. Trustee fees. The State of Washington also had filed a Motion to Dismiss or Convert for failure to pay post-petition taxes. By the time of the debtor's next payment to its counsel of $1,000.00 on June 1, 1998, the City of Spokane had also filed a Motion to Convert for failure to pay post-petition city gambling taxes. During the summer of 1998, there were references by counsel to the possibility of improper entanglement of the financial affairs of various entities owned or controlled by Mr. Saucier. No evidence was ever introduced on that issue and the issue never directly

1 addressed.

2 The debtor's June 12, 1998 payment of $1,750.00 was made after 3 the stay had been lifted to allow the license revocation 4 proceeding to go forward, but before the preliminary hearing on 5 June 15, 1998 on the various Motions to Dismiss or Convert. At 6 that hearing, the IRS indicated it also desired to file a Motion to 7 Convert or Dismiss for failure to pay post-petition taxes. As 8 there were disputed issues of fact, final hearing on the various 9 Motions was scheduled for July 13, 1998.

10 At that hearing, testimony indicated that all post-petition 11 returns had by then been filed and most taxes referenced in the 12 motions paid, but that there was some dispute as to the remaining 13 amount due or taxes accruing after the motions were filed.
14 Operating statements were current, but showed significant losses 15 and significant additional post-petition taxes coming due shortly 16 after the hearing. The court indicated there were serious doubts 17 about the debtor's ability to reorganize particularly in light of 18 the continuing losses. The debtor was required to meet certain 19 requirements such as filing all post-petition tax returns and 20 paying post-petition taxes pending a later hearing scheduled for 21 September 4, 1998. By the hearing on September 4, 1998, the debtor 22 had filed amended operating statements which significantly reduced 23 the amount of post-petition losses and had made significant post-24 petition tax payments. The debtor was required to provide 25 additional financial information to the interested parties and 26 again required to meet certain conditions such as continuing to pay 27 post-petition taxes. The final hearing on the various motions was 28 scheduled for November 23, 1998.

1 On October 15, 1998, the debtor's counsel received a payment
2 of $6,000.00 from Galaxy Gaming and on November 12, 1998, a payment 3 of $3,000.00 from the debtor. By the latter date, the debtor had 4 filed a Disclosure Statement and Plan and the City had filed 5 pleadings indicating that the debtor had failed to pay post-6 petition taxes as ordered in September. Several objections to the 7 Disclosure Statement and Plan were filed. At the hearing on 8 November 24, 1998, the court converted the case to a Chapter 7 as 9 the debtor had failed to meet all the requirements previously set 10 by the court.

11 Application of these rather lengthy facts to the question of 12 disgorgement must be considered in light of the purpose of the 13 requirement for supplemental disclosure. A debtor which places 14 property of the estate into the hands of its attorney as a security 15 retainer has in reality placed those funds, at least temporarily, 16 beyond the reach of its creditors. The funds are no longer
17 available to pay ordinary operating expenses. Most Chapter 11 18 debtors are in dire financial straights and utterly dependent upon 19 their own counsel to guide them through the reorganization process.
20 It is for these reasons that the Code requires bankruptcy courts
21 and the U.S. Trustee to monitor Chapter 11 debtors' relationship 22 with its professionals. Boh! Ristorante, Inc., supra.

23 In the situation of security retainers paid by third parties, 24 disclosure is necessary to address the possibility of any conflict 25 of interest on the part of the debtor's counsel. Such payments may 26 also be relevant to questions concerning the debtor's relationship 27 with insiders and subsidiary or sister corporations.

28 In this particular case, the debtor's counsel received

1 $5,750.00 from the debtor at times when it was apparent that the 2 debtor was not meeting its post-petition obligations such as U.S.
3 Trustee fees and taxes. Operating statements indicated extremely 4 large losses. It is entirely possible that due to the relatively 5 small amount of funds received from the debtor, the U.S. Trustee 6 would not have objected if he had known. It is quite possible that 7 even if he had objected, the court would have allowed the amounts 8 to be paid. However, the question is disclosure, not whether the 9 security retainers would have been allowed. The disclosure 10 certainly should have occurred.

11 The court is unaware of any discovery or discussions among 12 counsel occurring in 1998 regarding the financial relationship 13 among the debtor and other entities owned or controlled by 14 Mr. Saucier. The lease assumption situation and occasional 15 comments of counsel in court indicated some possibility that this 16 could become an issue in the proceeding. Under such circumstances, 17 the security retainer received from Galaxy Gaming becomes an 18 important piece of information. Again, it is not a question 19 whether the U.S. Trustee would have objected to such payments or 20 whether knowledge of the payments would have precipitated questions 21 being raised regarding the relationship of that entity to the 22 debtor. The question is disclosure, not whether the disclosure 23 would have had any effect on the bankruptcy proceeding. Disclosure 24 should have occurred.

25 IV.

26 CONCLUSION

27 F.R.B.P. 2016 requires disclosure of all payments and failure
28 to disclose any amount of payment from any source subjects counsel

1 to the risk of disgorging all payments received, disclosed or not.
2 In this particular case, there is no evidence that failure to 3 disclose post-petition payments was willful rather than inadvertent 4 or negligent, and pre-petition payments were disclosed timely.
5 Consequently, it would be inappropriate to require disgorgement of 6 pre-petition payments. As to the post-petition payments, 7 ordinarily the failure to disclose would result in disgorgement of 8 all post-petition fees. However, there is one vital mitigating 9 factor not yet addressed.

10 It has unfortunately been the practice in this District for 11 most debtor's counsel to ignore F.R.B.P. 2016's duty to supplement 12 statements of compensation when funds are placed into a trust
13 account post-petition. Filing of supplemental disclosure 14 statements has been rare. It would not be fair to Mr. O'Rourke to 15 impose the full penalty as Mr. O'Rourke has unfortunately followed 16 a commonly accepted practice in this District. The practice of 17 disregarding supplemental disclosure requirements under 18 F.R.B.P. 2016 must change, and if it does not, counsel will be 19 required to disgorge all post-petition security retainers and, in 20 appropriate cases, pre-petition payments. In this case of first 21 impression in the District, the penalty should be modified. After 22 balancing the clear unambiguous language of the Rule and the 23 circumstances of this particular proceeding and the mitigating 24 factor, disgorgement of $5,000.00 will be required as a penalty for 25 failure to timely disclose the post-petition payments.

26 Although the amount sought as compensation is reasonable and 27 otherwise would be allowable under 11 U.S.C. § 330, $5,000.00 of 28 the post-petition payments of $15,500.00 should be disgorged for

1 failure to comply with the supplemental disclosure requirements of 2 F.R.B.P. 2016 and the allowed fees reduced by that amount. That 3 $5,000.00 is to be paid to the Chapter 7 Trustee. Both the U.S.
4 Trustee and the debtor raised the issue of who should receive the 5 post-petition funds paid by Galaxy Gaming if in fact they are 6 required to be disgorged. That issue is not currently before the 7 court and will not be addressed at this time. The funds should be 8 disgorged to the Chapter 7 Trustee who will then propose a 9 distribution of those funds to the creditors in the Chapter 7 10 proceeding or to the debtor or to Galaxy Gaming or to whomever he 11 deems appropriate. All interested parties will have an opportunity 12 to object to that proposed distribution and argue whatever issues 13 are then relevant. Debtor's counsel may pay the allowed costs of 14 $1,875.45 and allowed fees with the remaining security retainer now 15 held in trust.

16 The Clerk of the Court is directed to file this Memorandum
17 Decision and provide copies to counsel.
