Debtor(s).	)	MEMORANDUM DECISION RE:
	)	BANK OF AMERICA'S MOTION
	)	FOR RELIEF FROM STAY

THIS MATTER came on for hearing before the Honorable Patricia C. Williams on March 7, 2000 upon creditor Bank of America's Motion for Relief from Stay. Debtors were represented by Greg Heline and creditor Bank of America was represented by Laurin Schweet. The court reviewed the files and records herein, heard argument of counsel and was fully advised in the premises.

On November 17, 1999 Bank of America repossessed the 1993 Chevrolet Blazer in which it had a security interest. The debtor was, at the time, some months past due in his monthly contract payment of $403.97. On November 29, 1999, the debtor commenced a Chapter 13 proceeding and in a modified plan proposed to pay Bank of America the alleged fair market value of the vehicle over the life of the plan. Bank of America requested relief from the automatic stay and filed an objection to confirmation of the plan.

MEMORANDUM DECISION RE: . . . - 1

1 At a hearing on January 18, 2000, the court required Bank of 2 America to return possession of the vehicle to debtor and required 3 the debtor to make pre-confirmation adequate protection payments
4 and set a briefing schedule on the underlying legal issue addressed 5 by this Memorandum Decision.

6 The issue is whether the property of the estate is the vehicle 7 itself or merely the debtor's right to redeem the vehicle which, 8 under state law, necessitates a lump sum payment rather than 9 installments during a Chapter 13 plan.

10 Property of the estate is defined in 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1) as 11 ". . . all legal or equitable interests of the debtor in property 12 as of the commencement of the case." The interest of the debtor in 13 a particular piece of property is determined by reference to state 14 law. Butner v. United States, 440 U.S. 48, 99 S. Ct. 914, 59
15 L. Ed. 2d 136 (1979). In the case of an automobile, the debtor's 16 interest has many different facets or components. The debtor is 17 listed on the Certificate of Title as a registered owner. The 18 debtor has possession. The debtor has an insurable interest in the 19 vehicle. The debtor has the right to exercise control over the 20 vehicle such as having it repainted or stored. The repossession by 21 Bank of America in this case only deprived the debtor of 22 possession, but did not deprive the debtor of all components of his 23 legal interest. The repossession was only the first step in a 24 multi-step process which, if completed, would have deprived the 25 debtor of all of his interest in the vehicle.

26 Pursuant to R.C.W. 62A.9-503, a secured party has the right to 27 take possession of personal property collateral after default and 28 62A.9-504 allows a secured party to dispose of the collateral. By

1 its very language, 62A.9-504(4) provides that only when collateral 2 is sold to a bona fide purchaser is the debtor deprived of all 3 interest in the repossessed property.

4       When collateral is disposed of by a secured party after 5 default, the disposition transfers to a purchaser for 6 value all of the debtor's rights therein, discharges the 7 security interest under which it is made and any security
8 interest or lien subordinate thereto. The purchaser 9 takes free of all such rights and interests even though 10 the secured party fails to comply with the requirements 11 of this Part or of any judicial proceedings."

12 R.C.W. 62A.9-504(4).

13       Prior to the sale to a bona fide purchaser, several steps are 14 required. In the case of consumer goods such as this vehicle, the 15 secured creditor must first determine if the purchaser has paid 60% 16 of the cash price of the collateral in order to determine which 17 steps are next available to the creditor. R.C.W. 62A.9-505. The 18 creditor may elect to accept the collateral in full satisfaction of 19 the obligation but even so that election does not finally deprive 20 the debtor of all rights. Under R.C.W. 62A.9-505(b) only after the 21 creditor has sent notice of such election and the debtor fails to 22 object for 21 days may the creditor then retain the collateral and 23 extinguish the rights of the debtor.

24       If the creditor elects to sell the collateral, the creditor 25 must provide "reasonable notification" of the sale to the debtor.
26 The official comments to the Uniform Commercial Code state that the 27 requirement for reasonable notice is to allow debtors ". . .
28 sufficient time to take appropriate steps to protect their interest 29 by taking part in the sale or other disposition if they so desire." 30 Though the language does not directly address the question of when 31 debtors lose all interest in the vehicle, it is consistent with

1 R.C.W. 62A.9-504(4) as it implies that the debtor retains some 2 rights until the time of the sale.

3         The court concludes that the debtor retains both a legal and 4 equitable interest in the vehicle after repossession. This is true 5 by application of Washington's adoption of the Uniform Commercial 6 Code. Bank of America references the Eleventh Circuit decision of 7 Charles R. Hall Motors v. Lewis (In re Lewis), 137 F.3d 1280 (11th 8 Cir. Ala. 1998). That decision held that after repossession, the 9 vehicle itself was not property of the estate but only the right of 10 redemption. That case is not controlling precedent for this court.
11 Also, that case is not persuasive as it was decided based on the 12 substantive law of Alabama regarding the tort of conversion. It is 13 not clear why the Eleventh Circuit believed that the applicable 14 legal standard was the law of conversion, but the analysis is 15 certainly not relevant to this case.

16         R.C.W. 62A.9-506 allows a debtor to redeem the collateral at 17 any time prior to the sale or disposition. Bank of America argues 18 that only this right to redeem is property of the estate as the 19 debtor lost all interest in the vehicle itself at the time of 20 repossession. The state statutes do not so provide. Rather, they 21 provide that the debtor retains some interest in the vehicle until 22 the actual disposition or sale.

23         Undaunted, Bank of America argues that the general proposition 24 is that the commencement of a bankruptcy proceeding creates no new 25 rights for the debtor. In re Braker, 125 B.R. 798 (Bank. 9th Cir.
26 Or. 1991). Since at the time of the filing the debtor's only right 27 was to redeem the vehicle by a lump sum payment, Bank of America 28 argues that the commencement of the bankruptcy cannot create any

1 new right to redeem by making installment payments. In other words, 2 once a vehicle is repossessed, 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(3) which allows 3 the curing of a default in a Chapter 13 is inapplicable as the only 4 right to cure that arises under state law is by way of lump sum 5 payment.

6 There is no evidence in this case that any of the steps
7 required by R.C.W. 62A.9 were taken other than repossession. There 8 is no evidence that the debtor was provided with a notice of sale 9 or disposition of the property or a notice of the right to redeem.

10 Most importantly, creditor's reliance on Braker, supra, is 11 misplaced. That case concerned a foreclosure and sale of real 12 estate under Oregon law, under which a post-sale statutory period 13 of redemption exists. The Braker decision held that as the 14 foreclosure sale extinguished the contractual relationship, the 15 real estate mortgage was thereby extinguished. Consequently, there 16 was no installment payment contract in effect which could be cured 17 under 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5). The post-foreclosure sale redemption 18 rights under Oregon real property law do not reinstate the mortgage 19 but only provide a method to satisfy the obligation in a lump sum.

20 The later Bankruptcy Appellate Panel decision State, Acting By 21 and Through Director of the Dept. of Veteran's Affairs v. Hurt (In 22 re Hurt), 158 B.R. 154 (Bankr. 9th Cir. Or. 1993) analyzed not only 23 Braker, but the then existing law in all circuits concerning a 24 debtor's right to cure under 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) during a 25 statutory redemption period on real estate. At page 158 of the 26 opinion, the court summarized the case law as follows:

27 There are four potential cutoff points for 'cure' under 28 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5): (1) at the time of the contractual acceleration; (2) upon entry of foreclosure

1 judgment; (3) at the time of the foreclosure sale; or (4)
2 upon expiration of the redemption period. The Ninth 3 Circuit Appellate Courts have addressed the potential to 4 'cure' within the context of two of the four periods. In 5 In re Metz, the court addressed cutoff option # 1 stating 6 that the debtor has the right to cure the prepetition 7 acceleration of a home mortgage debt triggered by 8 default. In re Metz, 820 F.2d 1495, 1497 (9th Cir.
9 1987). In In re Braker, the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel 10 addressed cutoff option # 4 stating that the debtor does 11 not have the right to cure after a prepetition 12 foreclosure sale. In re Braker, 125 B.R. 798, 801 (9th 13 Cir. BAP 1991). In this appeal, we are asked to address 14 an issue of first impression: whether the right to cure
15 under § 1322(b)(5) is extinguished at foreclosure 16 judgment (option # 2) or at the foreclosure sale (option 17 #3).

18 After an analysis of the various legal theories applied by 19 various courts, Hurt held that a debtor is allowed to cure under 20 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(5) until the time of the sale. Although not 21 determinative of the issue in this case which concerns personal 22 property, the comprehensive and articulate analysis contained in 23 Hurt is persuasive when applied to the facts of this case.

24 While true as a general proposition that the commencement of 25 a bankruptcy proceeding does not expand debtor's existing state law 26 rights, there are numerous instances where state law rights of 27 creditors are modified by the Code. For example, 11 U.S.C. § 506 28 limits a creditor's right to recover on its secured claim to the value of the collateral. This is clearly in conflict with R.C.W.
62A.9-506 which would otherwise allow the creditor to recover the full obligation owed as well as the costs of repossession, reconditioning and sale as well as attorney fees.

11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(2) specifically states that the rights of holders of secured claims may be modified in a Chapter 13 plan.
Although Bank of America asks this court to read into that section an exception for state law redemption rights, the court declines to 1 do so. 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(3) and (5) are simply other instances 2 where the Bankruptcy Code modifies the rights otherwise held by 3 secured creditors under state law. The Code provides that in a 4 Chapter 13, default may be cured "within a reasonable time" 5 regardless of the fact that the state law may give the creditor the 6 right to accelerate or only provide for cure by payment of a lump 7 sum. To the extent state law does not allow a cure of a default 8 over time, which manifestly a requirement for a lump sum redemption 9 would not, it contravenes 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(3) and (5). Only 10 after a sale of the vehicle has occurred is the debtor deprived of 11 all interest in the vehicle. Once the debtor has lost rights in 12 the vehicle, the question of cure becomes irrelevant.

13 Consequently, the court finds that the debtor may pay the 14 amount of this allowed secured claim within a reasonable time 15 during the plan and that R.C.W. 62A.9-506 is inapplicable. The 16 remaining issues regarding the fair market value of the vehicle and 17 adequacy of any proposed plan payment will be determined during the 18 confirmation process.

19 The Clerk of Court is directed to file this Memorandum 20 Decision and provide copies to counsel.
